WRS NEW DEVELOPMENTS

As part of its continuing strategy to bring new technology to the unforgiving field of environmental, industrial, and utility remediation, WRS Environmental Services has launched a program to significantly strengthen our clients' experience by introducing a mobile digital platform that allows WRS field crews to immediately respond to redirected client priorities while further increasing accountability.

WRS Acting President Courtney Lampasona stated, "WRS has introduced new technology to our field crews to greatly enhance efficiencies in collecting and reporting data. This new software brings added value to our clients while underscoring our commitment to acquire and deploy technology that directly improves our ability to meet that one field constant: the unexpected."

WRS Environmental Services partnered with The Sequel Group to create the custom software that seamlessly integrates with WRS' current platforms. It not only creates field efficiencies but improves reporting and accountability, captures accurate asset and material information, and provides WRS' clients with an intuitive dashboard they can access to receive collaborative analytics.

Mrs. Lampasona explained, "This mobile application allows our field crews to receive work orders, change requests, real time status updates, and coordinate scheduled and unscheduled work. This creates far more effective WRS 'Rapid-Ready' response teams which are crucial to our clients when they are in need of remediation `stat!'"

The introduction of the digitized platform also eliminates time-wasting administrative paperwork while strengthening the transparency and documentation that are essential to WRS projects.

Marc Makely, the CEO of The Sequel Group said, "We've worked closely with WRS for many years in various capacities. In 2018, WRS implemented several of our available technologies to streamline their field operations. As a result, they've seen vast improvements and gained many efficiencies. We are proud to have WRS as our business partner."
